

Woodstock anniversary The unofficial uniform of Woodstock joins other festival paraphernalia later

BY DIONNE SEARCEY
STAFF WRITER

August 16, 2004

ALBANY -- A blond boy no more than 7 past the stuffed ruby-throated hummin 1600s-era American Indian thatched w coming to a dead stop at a glass case more modern artifact: a pair of 1969

CBSNEWS.com

July 7, 2009 11:05am ET

The Early Show CBS Evening News 48 Hours

ENTERTAINMENT

Section Front

E-mail This Story Printable Version

Woodstock Relics Honored In Museum

ALBANY, N.Y., June 24, 2004

(AP) Steve Shashok was a lanky, long-haired 21-year-old when he went to Woodstock. Through three days of music and mud, he wore the same bell bottoms covered with a crazy quilt of colored and corduroy patches.

The pants are now history — officially.

Detail of patchwork jeans made by Steve Shashok, eight years in the making, which he wore to the 1969 Woodstock, in the New York State Museum. (Photo: AP)

QUOTE

"It's a little strange because it does make me think of my age and directions I didn't take, you know, the path not taken."

Julie Lomoe, a contributor of Woodstock memorabilia at the

The multi-patched jeans are being displayed at the New York State Museum among dozens of evocative artifacts from the 1969 concert: ticket stubs, a leather head band, programs, a New York Daily News headlined "TRAFFIC UPTIGHT AT HIPPIEFEST" and a conga drum. The artifacts came from a few dozen of the 400,000 attendees who answered a recent call to lend personal bits of hippie history for the exhibit.

The thought of Woodstock in a museum

COMPLETE CLASSIFIEDS

PLACE AN AD

careerbuilder

Find a Job Post a Resume Post a Job

cars.com

Drive it home today!

MARKETPLACE

Free Grocery Coupons

Site Search

Go

HOME PAGE

LONG

NEW

NATIO

WORL

HEAL

SPOR

BUSIN

OPIN

Travel

U.S. and Canada

Europe

NEWS ALL THE TIME
1010 WINS.COM

Search Advanced Search

Woodstock His

TRAVEL

Baby boomers beware: Woodstock museum

Exhibit of artifacts from the 1969 concert

